

AI-Native Value Architect

Translate AI potential into real-world business results

Course duration: 2 days

Overview

AI is no longer a side project. It is becoming fundamental to how organisations compete, deliver value, improve customer experiences and redesign the way work gets done.

But access to AI tools alone does not create business value. Organisations need people who can identify the right opportunities, align business and technical stakeholders, manage risk and guide AI initiatives from early ideas through to sustainable implementation.

The AI-Native Value Architect course develops this capability.

Across two instructor-led, project-based days, you will learn how to guide cross-functional teams through the AI-Native Solution Lifecycle, taking an AI opportunity from its first signal through to a production decision.

You will learn how to uncover value from existing AI capabilities, identify and shape high-value opportunities, translate technical considerations into business language, address the common failure modes that stall AI initiatives, and build the artefacts needed to accelerate execution.

About this course

Business impact

- Closes the AI execution gap by enabling leaders to move initiatives out of the POC graveyard and into production
- Improves alignment between business, tech, and leadership to reduce rework and delays
- Establishes a repeatable network of Value Architects across the ART for launching and scaling AI solutions enterprise-wide

What you will learn

- Recognise the five failure modes that stall AI pilots—unready data, unplanned operations, unbounded risk, unengineered adoption, and unmeasured value
- Run the AI-Native Solution Lifecycle—Sense, Discover, Design, Deliver—to move an initiative from first signal to a production decision
- Translate AI concepts into business language that engages non-technical stakeholders and secures sponsorship
- Build the AI-Native Solution Charter, Value Blueprint, and implementation plans that accelerate execution

After completing the course, you'll be eligible to take the AI-Native Value Architect exam.
